Doesn't Want a Second Term. A special from Washington to the St. Louis Republican gives the following information: "President Cleveland neither wishes nor will accept a renomination." The correspondent of the Republican says he has the highest possible authority for the statement and it can be depended upon as strictly and entirely true. It comes from the President himself, who made a declaration to this effect on Wednesday to a prominent democratic Senator from one of the Western States, who is on terms of especial intimacy at the White House. The President spoke with so much deliberate carnest-ness and such studied emphasis that the Senator with whom he was talking is certain there is no reason to question his perfect and entire sincerity. His manner, not less than his words, indicated that the decision has been also been als claration was simply the decision of a firm resolution which had resulted from careful consideration of all phases of the matter. The President said he had not given any intimation of his feelings to the respresentatives of the press for the simple reason that he felt nothing he might say about not wishing or being willing to take a second term would be believed. "I hardly expect anybody to believe it," he said, "except my wife, "but it is so, none the less." Continuing, he added: "Everything I do, every appointment I make, they think is to secure pointment I make, they think is to secure re-election. On the contrary I am counting the days that remain until my release from office just as if I were a prisoner in confinement." Apparently to make it plain that he had taken no half-hearted resolution, the President proceeded to speak of the exacting and laborious duties which fall to the in-cumbent of the presidential office, when the functions of the presidency are administered with the scrupulous and minute faithfulness he has brought to the position. No man, he said, could endure the severe strain of such labor, at once physical and mental, for a onger period than four years, without risk of permanent injury to his health. For these reasons he could not think of a continuance of his term beyond the four years he has half completed. Nothing, he said to he has half completed. Nothing, he said to his senatorial visitor, would persuade him to alter this resolution, which he had deliberately formed. He did not want a second term and he did not believe there were any obligations of public duty which could require him to forego his personal wishes. The Senator, who has repeated this significant conversation to his friends, says that while the Presultant of th tion to his friends, says that while the President was not talking for the purpose of getting his views about re-election before the public, there was no intimation that he desired his words to be regarded as confidential. The Senator has spoken freely of the interview to personal friends without any injunction of secrecy, and it is not unlikely this private discussion of the matter will eventually provoke some formal and public utterance by the President. The Sanator was quite sure there was none of the coy strategy of the artful politician, who thinks by this device to appear as being sought rather than by seeking the office in this disavowal of sec-ond term ambition by President Cleveland. He is convinced every word was meant for just what it implies, and that it will be wholly useless to plan the next campaign on the basis of a renomination of Cleveland. The President was specific and decided in saying he could not be induced by any possible considerations to change his mind: that there was nothing in the way of argu-ment which could be brought to bear to alter the resolution determined alike by every consideration of personal comfort and hap-piness, and by the most conscientious re-ward for what could fairly be asked of him as a patriotic servant of the people.

THE EDITOR'S PASS.-Hereniter, when the Texas editor desires to travel for his health or amusement, he will call out: Bring forth my fiery, untamed Arabian steed!" and a boy will lead out a slab-sided, emaciated mule, that will have to be stuffed to prevent his bones from cutting the harness-that is, if the editor is so fortunate as to possess a fiery untamed steed. Hereto-fore, much to the surprise of the general public, the poverty stricken editor has been in the habit of riding in a parlor car. As soon as the free passes are abolished, he will have to rely on some other mode of transportation. It is no disgrace to walk. We read in the Bible that Enoch walked with the Lord 300 years, and Enoch, to his credit be it said, was no professional pedestrian. Walking, moreover, hardens and develops the muscles, as is shown in the quality and quantity of cheek of the average walking delegate. If the Congress of the United States insists upon it, the journalist can step off with a light heart and an elestic step, that is if he can borrow a pair of rubbers. If the journalist sees proper, he can get a bicycle in exchange for an ad., and use it. In a short time he will have ex-perienced more severe falls than the oldest inhabitant. A man can travel all over the earth on a bicycle, for we once saw it done. The rider traveled about twenty feet on his your orders at our store.

FINANCIAL.

English bondholders are endeavoring, through the instrumentality of the council of foreign bondholders, to bring about a satisfactory settlement of the debt of Virginia.

With this object in view, the English bondholders have, to a large extent, agreed to pool their bonds and have authorized the council of foreign bondholders to act for them in the negotiations which are about to be had between a commission senteut from London and a committee appointed by the Logislature of Virginia.

It is most desirable that all holders of Virginia bonds, both at home and abroad, should unite in the effort to effect an early settlement of the State debt. To better accomplish this object, the council of foreign bondholders carnestly request the holders of Virginia bonds in America to cooperate with them and to forward to ourselves their names and addresses, stating the amount of bonds held, at as early a day as possible.

We will be glad to furnish copies of the plan adopted by the English bondholders for pooling thair bonds at London, and to give any other information that may be desired.
